

Born on December 8th, 1977, Stephen Jones is a Welsh rugby great whose skill, leadership, and dedication have made him a prominent figure in rugby history.

Making his debut for the Llanelli RFC, he quickly rose through the ranks, showcasing his prowess as a fly-half. His ability to control the game, precise kicking, and tactical intelligence earned him a place in the Welsh national team.

Making his international debut in 1998, Jones went on to become one of the most capped players in Welsh rugby history.

A key figure in the renowned "Golden Generation" of Welsh rugby, he played an instrumental role in securing Grand Slam victories in the Six Nations Championships of 2005 and 2008.

Jones' versatility extended to the British and Irish Lions, representing them in multiple tours.

His calm demeanor under pressure and ability to navigate high-stakes situations made him a linchpin in the squad.

Off the field, Stephen Jones is recognized for his sportsmanship, humility, and commitment to the community.

His rugby boots are proudly displayed on the wall at Carmarthen Athletic Rugby Club.
